Staying warm in another time

Courier staff report

Those traversing the alleys of downtown Friday witnessed a rare sight as construction workers unloaded these elaborately decorated radiators into a shop basement on Main Street.

Workers Dwayne Hauser, Shawn Blair (above) and Charles Coble, were transfering the historic, vintage radiators from the white gingerbread house on W. Second Street to Unique Boutique.

Coble, who has worked in construction his whole life, said the radiators were "some of the finer pieces I've seen in a cast iron heating system in my life."

According to the shop owners, the radiators are on sale and the cost depends on how long each is. Priced at $15 per section, a short radiator could cost $100 and a longer one $200. The vintage covers are included at an additional $50 to $75.

Birthday celebration

Farm Bureau donates 40 tons of food

Courier staff report

INDIANAPOLIS – In celebration of its 100th anniversary, Indiana Farm Bureau announced that its county Farm Bureaus across the state donated nearly 40 tons of food to more than 90 charities across Indiana.

Indiana Farm Bureau was founded March 25, 1919, by a group of Indiana farmers. It launched the statewide charitable giving campaign, 100 Pounds for 100 Years, challenging each county Farm Bureau to collect at least 100 pounds of food and donate the food to a local charity before the anniversary.

More than 79,200 pounds of food was donated to more than 90 charities across the state. According to USDA's What We Eat in America, the average meal is 1.2 pounds of food, Farm Bureau said. By that average, INFB's donation accounts for approximately 66,000 meals in Indiana.

"Hoosier farmers are always there to lend a hand to a friend, share a meal with a neighbor or support others in their communities who are less fortunate," said INFB President Randy Kron. "I'm so encouraged by the great results from our county Farm Bureaus, who participated in this community campaign in honor of Farm Bureau's 100th anniversary."

Indiana Farm Bureau and Indiana Farm Bureau Insurance also collected non-perishable food items for Gleaners Food Bank of Indiana. The state organizations were responsible for more than 7,300 pounds of the overall total. That food was donated to Gleaners Food Bank of Indiana in early March.

While nearly every county Farm Bureau donated at least 100 pounds of food for the campaign, Posey County Farm Bureau was the most charitable county Farm Bureau, donating 8,438 pounds of food to Posey County Food Pantries and the Partners in Food program. Their donation was a combination of food and monetary gifts.

Jefferson County Farm Bureau donated 500 lbs of food to Ruth Haven House, Jefferson House, House of Hope, the Salvation Army and St. Vincent de Paul.

Switzerland County Farm Bureau donated 300 lbs of food to the Manta Project.

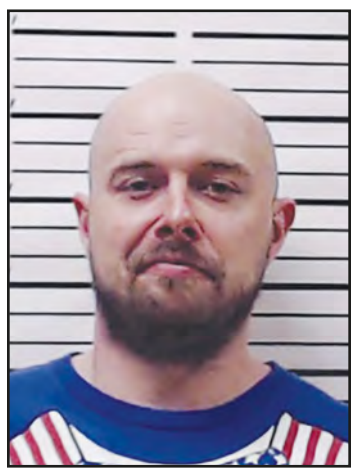
Madison man charged in child solicitation

Courier staff report

Jeremy Rice, 31, of Madison, was arrested Thursday by Madison Police after an investigation that began with allegations of inappropriate sexual behavior with a minor.

Rice faces charges of child solitication, a Level 5 felony; dissemination of matter or performance harmful to minors, a Level 6 felony; and sexual conduct in presence of a minor, a Level 6 felony.



Jeremy Rice

The probable cause affidavit said the mother of the victim contacted police after her 11-year-old daughter told her Rice had asked her for oral sex. The mother's report also included text messages between herself and Rice, in which Rice admitted to asking the minor for oral sex and blamed it on a "pedo" voice in his head. He also told the victim's mother that he had masturbated in the young girl's presence, under a blanket in a separate bed, when the three were on a trip together, according to the probable cause affidavit.

The victim said in a forensic interview that Rice had showed her a video on his phone of oral sex when they were alone. The victim said the incidents took place in November 2018.

Rice had his initial hearing Friday in the Jefferson County Superior Court. He was released on his own recognizance and will be monitored electronically until his trial. The court also filed a no-contact order on behalf of the victim and ordered Rice to undergo a mental health assessment.

Hanover man killed in crash

A Hanover resident was killed Friday night when the motorcycle he was riding left a northbound lane and struck a car traveling southbound.

Justin Blankenship, 30, whose license plates listed him as from Carrollton, Kentucky, was northbound on Lanier Drive near Clifty Drive about 7:45 p.m. when his 2007 Harley Davidson motorcycle left the northbound lane and entered the southbound lane where it struck a 2010 Chevrolet Cobalt head on. The Chevrolet Cobalt was driven by Creighton Sever, 25, of Madison. Sever sustained minor injuries and was not taken to the hospital. Blankenship died from the injuries he received in the crash and was dead at the scene.

Justin Blankenship

A report from Indiana State Police Senior Trooper Matthew Holley said it is believed Blankenship was not wearing his helmet at the time of the crash.

Blakenship lived in Hanover for the last year. He was the father of two young sons and was the son of Jeffrey Blankenship and Heather Lee Bennett Dunn. Blankeship was a 2007 graduate of Carroll County High School. He was a Kentucky All-State football and baseball star and went on to play college baseball for Campbellsville University and Eastern Kentucky University. He had served two-and-a-half years in the U.S. Marine Corps.

Blankenship was a welder at 3-D Metal Works, a contractor for NUCOR Stainless in Ghent, Kentucky, at the time of his death.

The crash investigation is ongoing. Toxicology results on both drivers are pending at this time.

Trooper Holley was assisted at the scene by the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department, Madison Police Department, Madison Fire Department, Jefferson County EMS and Jefferson County Coroner's Office.

State Quitline offering free anti-smoking medication

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Tobacco Quitline is offering tobacco users free medication to help them quit. The state health department said nicotine replacement therapy will be available until supplies run out. The department said nearly 7,500 residents received a free two-week supply of nicotine replacement therapy, including gum or patches, in the past year. Tobacco users first must enroll in the Indiana Tobacco Quitline, which provides a coach who will make a personalized quit plan. Online counseling is also provided. Once enrolled, users will receive a two-week supply of medication. The phone number is (800) 784-8669. The department says about 22 percent of Indiana adults smoke, and smoking kills 11,000 Hoosiers each year.

Girl, 8, shot, dies; dad takes to fire station

INDIANAPOLIS — An 8-year-old girl died after her father took her to a fire station with a gunshot wound. Police said officers responded to a call to assist EMS at the fire station on Sunday evening and found the wounded girl, who died after being taken to the hospital. Police said in a statement early Monday they're "still piecing this incident together." Investigators working to determine where the shooting took place searched the family's home for potential evidence. Police said they're seeking the girl's father for questioning. They said the man at one point had his 3-year-old son with him, but the child was later found safe with family.

Driver facing DUI in crash with officer

INDIANAPOLIS — A police officer and a motorist accused of driving drunk lost consciousness and were hurt after a crash involving their vehicles. The Indianapolis Metropolitan Police Department said in a release that both were injured early Sunday and taken to hospitals. The driver is in serious condition and the officer is expected to recover after an unspecified surgery. Investigators said the driver of a Chevrolet Impala turned left in front of the officer's car, which was proceeding on a green light, and struck it. Both cars spun and hit utility poles. Police said the motorist told officers he drank alcohol earlier, though investigators await blood-test results to determine whether charges will be filed. The release says it's the third accident since December involving an Indianapolis police officer and someone accused of drunken driving.

Home for LGBTQ youth to open in summer

INDIANAPOLIS — A member of the LGBTQ community who has experience working with transitional housing and homelessness has been named the founding executive director of what's billed as Indiana's first home for LGBTQ youth who have nowhere safe to live. Trinity Haven is scheduled to open this summer in the Mapleton-Fall Creek neighborhood of Indianapolis. It will serve LGBTQ youth 16 to 21. When it opens, Trinity Haven will be able to house up to 10 youth at a time, with the potential to eventually house at least 15. The new director, Jenni White, has worked since 2010 at an agency offering supportive services and housing options to survivors of domestic violence. Trinity Haven has received funding from the Lilly Endowment, the Coalition for Homelessness Intervention and Prevention and Episcopal churches, among others.

$8.1M to clean, repurpose coal mines

INDIANAPOLIS — Officials say Indiana is getting about $8.1 million in federal funding to help clean up and repurpose abandoned coal mines. The funding from the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement was announced this month by Acting Interior Secretary David Bernhardt. The grants are funded in part by a fee based on coal produced in the United States. They aim to help to eliminate dangerous conditions and pollution caused by past coal mining. More than $291 million is being distributed to states and Native American tribes. Past projects have closed dangerous mine shafts, reclaimed unstable slopes, treated acid mine drainage and restored water supplies damaged by mining.

2nd Asian carp type near Lake Monroe

BLOOMINGTON — State wildlife officials say a second type of invasive Asian carp has reached the waters just downstream of Indiana's largest reservoir. The recent find of bighead carp in Salt Creek just below Lake Monroe's dam comes after silver carp have been found since at least 2015 in the dam's tailwaters. Asian carp haven't been found in the lake, which spans nearly 11,000 acres in Monroe and Brown counties. But the Department of Natural Resources is reminding anglers it's illegal to use small fish taken from the dam's tailwaters as bait in Lake Monroe itself. That prohibition aims to keep juvenile Asian carp from reaching the lake and its upstream tributaries. DNR fisheries biologist Dave Kittaka told The Herald-Times "prevention is the best way to stop" Asian carp from spreading.

Covered bridge work to repair from fire

BLOOMINGTON — Work has begun on a covered bridge near the site of a span destroyed decades ago by fire. Workers used cranes Friday to move the bridge's wooden frame into place across Beanblossom Creek, a few miles north of Bloomington. The 127-foot-long span is being built near the site of a covered bridge destroyed by fire in 1976. The Herald-Times reported that crews are using materials from the Cedar Ford Bridge, which was built in 1885 in Shelby County but dismantled in 1975. Federal money is covering 80 percent of the $1.6 million project. When the bridge is completed, it will become the only covered bridge in Monroe County, which once had as many as 14 covered bridges.

Parents suing camp, police in molestation

COLUMBUS — The parents of a boy allegedly molested by a reserve sheriff's deputy at a campground are suing the campground, police and their reserve program. The civil suit comes after Larry L. Scottm, 73, of Hope was charged last July with child molestation and several other charges. The (Columbus) Republic reported the suit seeks damages and names as defendants Scott, Ceraland Park and Campground, the Bartholomew County Sheriff's Department and its reserve program. It alleges that Scott, who's no longer a reserve deputy, molested the 12-year-old boy while volunteering as a night-time security supervisor at Ceraland. The suit said Ceraland advertises that a county reserve deputy is on guard around the clock. Ceraland's attorney denies in court documents that Scott's alleged criminal actions were linked to his job.

Purdue ends plastic straws for paper option

WEST LAFAYETTE — Purdue University hopes to reduce unnecessary waste by replacing plastic straws with paper alternatives at its West Lafayette campus, which comes shortly after city officials took similar steps to cut down on plastic waste. The transition was completed earlier this month. It affects more than 30 operations on campus, including all the restaurants in the Purdue Memorial Union. Purdue Dining and Catering estimates the campus used 650,000 plastic straws in the past year. The university is purchasing its paper straws from Fort Wayne-based Aardvark, the university said. Aardvark's straws fully decompose in 45 to 60 days when composted, the company said. The West Lafayette City Council approved a resolution earlier this year that asked businesses to reduce their use of plastic straws, stirrers and utensils. The university's dining and catering department also plans to raise awareness about straw waste and encourage students to stop using straws completely through a "Make This Your Last Straw" campaign.

Man charged in 1988 slaying dies in jail

SOUTH BEND — A man who pleaded guilty to the 1988 beating death of a pregnant mother has died in jail. The St. Joseph County prosecutor's office said George Kearney, 78, was found unresponsive Saturday night in the county jail's medical unit. Authorities say Kearney had been terminally ill and signed an order with jail medical staff to take no lifesaving measures if he stopped breathing. His guilty plea in the slaying of Miriam Rice,28, came earlier this month. Kearney was in prison for an unrelated crime when he confessed and said his co-defendant, Barbara Brewster, 56, was also responsible. Both were charged last year. Kearney faced up to 60 years in prison at his sentencing Friday. An autopsy is expected Monday.

Travel Center in Lake Station, southeast of Gary. The trucks were parked near to one another. No injuries have been reported. Fire officials say the blaze is under investigation.

Martinsville superintendent, assistant superintendent resign

By STEPHEN CRANE
(Martinsville) Reporter-Times

MARTINSVILLE — Martinsville's school superintendent and assistant superintendent both have resigned.

Superintendent Michele Moore and Assistant Superintendent Terry Terhune will both leave the Metropolitan School District of Martinsville this summer.

"At some point, you have to pass the baton to someone else," Moore said. "That time is now."

Moore cited the ongoing opposition she's had to confront in recent years as a contributing factor to the timing of her departure.

"I'm just tired," she said. "Five years is a long time. ... I knew within the next year, I needed to leave. But anything else we need to do was going to be a fight, and that's not healthy for the community."

Moore sent a district-wide email Friday morning about her decision to step down as the district's superintendent.

"It has been a whirlwind here," Moore said in the email. "We have spent five years moving the needle in our community and I am thankful for all the things big and small you have done for me both professional and personally."

Moore and school board members have faced criticism from some people in the community in recent years, with some critics going so far as to produce yard signs that read "No Moore" back in 2017. Last week, the group — once again upset with recent moves by the school district — put out another rallying cry to meet at a parking lot in the city to distribute new "No Moore" signs.

For the superintendent, that level of discourse and degree of discord was not going to be in the community's best interest.

"I've decided it's not worth it to the good people in the community to go to war," Moore said, adding that a school district's success depends on "the cooperation of everyone."

Despite the opposition she's faced in her tenure as superintendent, Moore said her litmus test for the decisions she's made has always been to ask, "What's best for the kids?"

She highlighted accomplishments such as the specialized focus within the elementary schools, the updates to the technology infrastructure, the day care program, the wellness center, facility updates, the renewed emphasis on vocational training, the balanced budget, higher teacher salaries and improved transparency within the district.

"That's why I sleep well at night," she said.

Moore plans to focus on her consulting business, Hoosier School Services.

"I plan to focus on helping districts manage change like we have in Martinsville, especially in declining enrollment," Moore noted in her email.

Terhune, meanwhile, will take on a new role with the Avon Community School Corp. He made that announcement following the Martinsville School District board's regular meeting Thursday night.

The last day for both administrators will be June 30.

3,000 piglets loose on I-70 after crash

(Terre Haute) Tribune-Star

About 100 piglets perished after a livestock hauler overturned on Interstate 70 in eastern Illinois, setting loose about 3,000 pigs along the highway.

Just after 8 a.m. Friday, Illinois State Police reported the crash about two miles west of Casey.

Police said the crash occurred after the driver became ill and drove off the roadway.

The crash did not close the highway, but motorists were cautioned to slow down in the area between Casey and Greenup.

At 2 p.m., troopers said the surviving pigs were captured and were back on their way to their destination in Indiana.

"We experienced a great community effort out there today, and for that we thankful and proud," said Trooper Tammy Welborn of District 12 in Effingham.

The pigs were reloaded thanks to the effort of Greenup Fire Protection District, Greenup Police Department, Casey Police Department, Illinois Department of Transportation, Effingham Equity and other local volunteers.

The driver was cited for improper lane usage.

The Herald Bulletin reported she was driving west on U.S. 36 Friday when her Honda Civic left the road, went into a ditch and struck an embankment. The car landed on its top.

33-year term in teen's killing

LEXINGTON — A judge has sentenced a man to 33 years in prison after he pleaded guilty to charges including murder in the 2016 Thanksgiving day fatal shooting of a 14-year-old boy. According to the Lexington Herald-Leader, Fayette Circuit Court Judge Lucy VanMeter sentenced Kevin Josue Ipina-Garcia, 25, Friday in the death of Angel Juarez. Juarez was shot in the chest at home through the front door. Ipina-Garcia's attorney, Jared Bewley, said his client was sorry. Court records show some victims suspected the boy's brother, Danilo Juarez, of orchestrating a robbery in which he was also robbed. Court records say Ipina-Garcia and another man went to the house, asking for Danilo Juarez, but another brother said he wasn't home. Court records say Ipina-Garcia shot through the door, hitting Angel Juarez.

2 killed in head-on crash

VANCEBURG— Police say two drivers have died in a head-on accident. Kentucky State Police said in a news release Sunday's accident along State Route 8 killed Kathy G. Hardy, 65, and Aric J. The cause of the accident remains under investigation.

State Police named Timothy Gambill, 44, as one of the deceased in the fire Saturday in West Liberty in Morgan County. Police did not name the 9-year-old who died. Both victims were dead at the scene. Police say no foul play is suspected at this time and the incident remains under investigation.

Business in Indiana

More Hoosiers at work than ever in state history...

ActiveCampaign, a provider of intelligence-driven sales and marketing automation for small businesses, announced plans to add more than 200 employees to its new Indianapolis office to keep up with growing demand from clients across more than 150 countries.

The State of Indiana and the City of Bloomington announced that Catalent, Inc., a global provider of advanced delivery technologies and development solutions for drugs, biologics and consumer health products, has commenced a significant expansion of its biologics manufacturing operations in Bloomington, with plans to create up to 200 new jobs by the end of 2024.

Gov. Eric Holcomb and local officials joined executives from Saturn Petcare, the largest private-label, pet food manufacturer in Europe, as they announced plans to establish the company's first U.S. facility in Vigo County, creating up to 200 new jobs by 2024. At the ceremony, Saturn Petcare unveiled a commemorative pet food label dedicated to Henry Holcomb, Indiana's first dog, called Henry's First Choice.

"Economic development has turned out to be workforce development as well, as they go hand in glove," Gov. Eric Holcomb said in an appearance Friday at Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology.

"In Indiana, we continue to break records. We've got more people working in the private sector than ever before in our 202-year history as a state — about 2.7 million Hoosiers," Holcomb said.

Holcomb chaired the Indiana Economic Development Corp. in a meeting on the Rose-Hulman campus.

After the meeting, he spoke about recent trips to Europe, which the governor said helped secure a facility in Vigo County. The Saturn Petcare facility in the Vigo County Industrial Park is the Germany-based company's first production plant in the U.S.

Robert A. Coons, Rose-Hulman president, said the institute's Rose-Hulman Ventures, a product design, rapid prototyping and development firm, has been involved in economic development.

"We have professional engineers on staff and highly talented student interns, we provide technical services and new product development for entrepreneurs, and established companies, to help them achieve their business plan, hopefully to secure external funding" and secure own full-time engineering staff, Coons said.

He referred to Arrhythmotech, a start-up company from the Indiana University School of Medicine.

"The founders had a concept for a monitoring system for when a patient was going to have a heart attack," Coons said. The concept required development of specific electronics and software. Rose-Hulman Ventures developed a prototype system for Arrhythmotech, which in 2016 was awarded a $1.5 million National Institutes of Health grant.

The committee also heard from Dayton Molendorf, chair of the IEDC's business development committee, on four unnamed projects, including a $305 million project for a new food manufacturing facility in Shelby County, to create 460 jobs by 2022. Another project involves the expansion of a company in Marion County for a "manufacturer of machines that produce thrust" marking a $425 million investment and the hiring an additional 357 new employees by 2020.

While improvements have been made, Indiana still has work to do.

"We have a long, long, long way to go. Indiana is near the bottom of the pile in entrepreneurship and innovation," Chris LaMothe, CEO of Elevate Ventures, told an audit and finance committee of the IEDC.

Elevate Ventures, founded in 2010, is funded through the Indiana Economic Development Corp., community foundations, and corporate and individual donors. The company provides coaching and advisory services through its entrepreneur-in-residence program, as well as investments in high potential high-growth Indiana companies.

The state contributes about $30 million to the IDEC, with some of those funds filtered to Elevate Ventures, specifically through the Indiana 21st Century Research and Technology Fund, created in 1999.

LaMothe said the state does have examples of success with entrepreneurs.

One example is Emerging Threats Pro, a cyber security start-up company in Lafayette. The company was valued at $840,000 when it started. Three years later, in 2015, Proofpoint acquired the company for $40 million, with $6.5 million coming back to the IEDC.

Gov. Holcomb said the state recognizes it needs more investment in start-up firms "and we have a long way to go," adding the state is making a push to attract more venture capital. "Indianapolis is now on the map and we are a very attractive place to grow," Holcomb said.

The only vote taken by the IDEC was to approve a two-year contract, with an option for a third year, with the Indianapolis Motor Speedway for a larger space in the IMS Pagoda. The state will pay $400,000 per year for the extra space. The state last year hosted representatives from 17 countries during the Indianapolis 500 as part of efforts to attract new investment.

The governor took one question on the possibility of relocating an Indiana casino license to Terre Haute.

"I applaud the leaders here in the Wabash Valley for coming together and singing from the sheet of music, so to speak," Holcomb said. "We depend, as a state, on the revenue that is generated from our casinos from gaming across the whole state. I have said, while it is not part of my legislative agenda or administrative agenda, it is something that I am willing to take a second look at because, after all, when all of these (casino) licenses were passed out initially, things have changed over time.

"I think it is appropriate to have this discussion in the legislature," the governor said. Because there are two casino licenses in Gary, "it does make sense to me that one of those could be split off and moved to another place."

But, he added, it will be up to the legislature to determine any changes in gaming.

Senate Bill 552, by Republican Senators Jon Ford (Terre Haute) and Mark Messmer (Jasper), would allow two casinos in Gary to be relocated from current sites on Lake Michigan. One would go to an inland location in Gary and the other to Vigo County.

It is next before the public policy of the Indiana House on Wednesday.

...but cautionary note on wages for future workers

By MICHAEL HICKS

Michael Hicks

Job quality, especially with respect to wages and benefits, will be a central part of the next national election. With job creation strong but wage growth lagging, we should expect tough questions about a variety of labor market policies. This will be especially true in the few states that have experienced mostly low-wage job growth in recent years. With Indiana growing low-wage jobs at a disproportionate rate, we should think through what "good" jobs might look like in a modern economy, and what role government could take in promoting them.

I'm a free market economist, so I think the best definition of a good job is one that a firm will offer and an employee will take. But, there are two sides to that definition. Labor markets match workers and employers, who both have a say in job quality. Workers need to obtain more education and skills when they cannot find the jobs they desire. Likewise, businesses need to offer better pay or benefits when they cannot find the workers they want. Workers and businesses are equal parties in labor markets, and government should treat them as equals.

Mostly, workers and businesses make labor markets work well, but there is a role for government. The state has an interest in making workers better educated, more productive and earn a higher wage. The reason for this has absolutely nothing to do with favoring some particular employer, or making sure a particular industry has enough workers. Rather, it is because the state spends a great deal subsidizing low-wage work in an effort to limit the effects of poverty. The numbers should prove shocking to many readers and employers.

For a family of four, with only one person working, it takes $24.50 per hour to lift the family from the rolls of public assistance. At $12.25 or lower, that family is eligible for almost every state and federal benefit, as it falls beneath the poverty line. Fortunately, this is a low wage, and summer lifeguards can often command $15 an hour in Indiana. Still, we should be very watchful about wages, and think long and hard about the wisdom of training young people for occupations that cannot support them or their families. Here's why.

That family of four earning $24.50 or less per hour is costly to the public purse. Their kids will receive a subsidized meal or two each day at school. The family might be eligible for Medicaid, which will cost $18,000 or more per year. They are unlikely to receive food supplements unless someone is pregnant. This family won't pay any income taxes and will receive some Earned Income Tax Credit. Their kids will have free college through both federal and state grant and scholarship programs.

The closer that family's earnings slip to $12.25 per hour, the more generous the benefits. Taxpayers will pay most of their rent, all their medical care, all their school lunch costs, a large Earned Income Tax Credit, and literally dozens of other programs. Now, I'm open to a broad debate over the size and incentive effects of these benefit programs, but apparently Congress is not. This is what we now have, for better or worse. This realization should inform our state and local policy towards jobs and job training. Sadly, we never seem to think through this in an adult way.

We need all kinds of jobs, but it is bad policy to incentivize a business that that pays on average less than $24.50 per hour. We already subsidize these jobs through direct payments to workers. In fact, most jobs we incentivize at the state and local level are well below this level.

We should be even more careful about promoting job training in careers that pay less than $24.50 an hour. In fact, we should dissuade young people from entering any career that won't pay well enough to lift their family from the rolls of public assistance. It continues to shock me that this simple idea is the opposite of today's message to Hoosier schoolchildren. Fewer than a quarter of the "Hot Jobs" without a high school diploma or less pay over $24.50 an hour. Moreover, even this list is suspect since it includes such careers as "Air Traffic Controller" that Indiana says needs nothing better than a high school diploma. The U.S. Department of Labor tells a very different story.

Perhaps the most important role of government is in ensuring that all students master the more fundamental and enduring skills of middle school mathematics and literacy. Over the coming two or three decades, no occupation will be left unchanged by technology. Workers who lack the fundamental skills of literacy and mathematics will be unable to adapt. Yet, stunningly, Indiana is shifting funds out of K-12 schooling and into job training.

Finally, we need to send a clear and consistent message to young workers. You should seek substantial education and training beyond high school, if you wish to raise a family in Indiana. If you don't, you should expect financial challenges throughout your life. Consider moving elsewhere. We must also send a clear message to employers: If you pay adults less than $24.50, do not ask for more incentives or complain about a skills gap or worker shortage. Your business plan already depends upon generous subsidies from Indiana taxpayers. If you cannot make it without more subsidies, move elsewhere.

If Indiana really aspires to be a place of growing prosperity, we need to be much more aspirational with our children's education and ask more of the businesses that employ them.

In Loving Memory of

Catherine Marie Wyatt

Catherine Marie Wyatt, known forever as Birdie, reached the end of her life on Friday, March 22, 2019. The oldest of four daughters, she was born on August 12, 1930 in Goshen, Kentucky, to Murrel and Mary Sanders Lyle, known as Grand Mama and Grand Daddy. Like her father, Catherine passed away from throat cancer in the spring of her eighty-eighth year.

The love of her six children follow her: Shari Wilson of Madison, Gary Purvis of Seabrook, Texas, Ilea Mannering of LaGrange, Kentucky, Chris Wyatt of Louisville, Kentucky, and both Debra Conklin and Mark Wyatt whom she now joins. She will be missed by seven grandchildren and seven great grandchildren. She has two surviving sisters, Delores Van Wye and Linda Pritchett, both of Madison. She was preceded in death by her sister Margaret Neace and grandchildren Megan Conklin and Gerald Purvis.

With deep roots in Oldham County, Kentucky, she was a proud resident of Harrods Creek, Kentucky where she owned and operated an alterations shop. Her customers weren't just acquaintances but personal friends with whom she shared life's joys and challenges. Previous to the opening the shop, Birdie enjoyed many years working and laughing along side friends at Cissell Manufacturing in Louisville, Kentucky. Upon retirement, she settled on a small farm near her beloved Madison, Indiana. It's here where she found peace among her antiques, fine china and many collectables while continuing to sew and socialize at the local Kroger store. Her family will remember her for her intelligence, eccentric style, determination, love of shopping, unconventional humor, flair for design, ease of conversation and appreciation of good food. She loved singing in the Prospect Baptist Church choir and playing the piano by ear. She was a sympathetic listener who never gave up on the ones she loved and always chose to see the best in them. Birdie was always the magnet people gravitated to at family reunions for her colorful stories and her genuine joy in hearing about the lives of all she met. Above all she was a survivor who made it through life with dignity and social grace.

The Reverend Ferrill Davis will conduct funeral services at 10:30 AM Wednesday, March 27, 2019 at Lytle Welty Funeral Homes & Cremation Service, Vail Chapel, 117 Holt Drive, Madison. Graveside services will be conducted Wednesday in Resthaven Memorial Cemetery, Louisville, with interment to follow.

Injustice reversed; he finally gets high school diploma

By VICTORIA St. MARTIN
South Bend Tribune

SOUTH BEND — Manson Adam Davis never stopped telling his story.

It's been nearly 60 years since he said he was kicked out of high school just two weeks before graduation. As Davis remembers it, his class was getting ready for a party and a teacher walked straight to the high school senior's desk, reached inside and produced a bottle of peppermint schnapps liqueur. To this day, Davis swears it wasn't his. The teacher, Davis recalls, told him to leave Washington High School and never come back.

"He came right to the thing, stuck his hand in and pulled it out and said, 'Oh, schnapps,'" said Davis, who's now 78, recalling the moment when the teacher arrived at his desk. (His wife believes a student put the bottle in Davis' desk and told the teacher it was there). "'I'm taking you to the office.' I never did get back."

It was 1960 in South Bend. Davis is black; the teacher, white, and, for many of those who've heard the story over the years, it was hard not to believe that the severity of the punishment — denying a high school athlete his diploma just weeks away from graduation — was racially motivated.

Officially, Davis has been listed in the records of the South Bend school system as a student who dropped out of high school and never earned a diploma. Unofficially, his story seemed to many like an example of a racially motivated injustice.

But after decades of sharing of his story, the system has reversed course and Davis received something he hasn't dreamed would be possible: a diploma.

"It feels different," said Davis, who can't help but show anyone who enters his West Side home the honorary diploma he was given at a South Bend school board meeting last month. "At least I got some paperwork now."

The overdue diploma Davis finally received — which officials have called "honorary" — is far from typical. A motion to approve it noted he was scheduled to graduate in June 1960. It describes how he served in the Air Force and was an active member of Greater Friendship Missionary Baptist Church.

And, in a nod to the diploma's fraught history, the measure included the acknowledgement Davis was not allowed to graduate in 1960 and that "race may have wrongly impacted the decision by the district at the time."

That admission by district officials may be overdue and bittersweet for some of of Davis' supporters. But School Bend Community Schools Corporation board member Dawn Jones, who played an instrumental role in helping Davis receive the diploma, felt it was an essential step toward righting a wrong.

A high school senior portrait of Manson Davis sits on a table near the front door of his South Bend home.

"There's very little difference between then and now when you look at the reasons why some kids are expelled and suspended in South Bend," Jones, who's African American, said in a telephone interview Monday. "We have been cited for having an overrepresentation of expulsions and suspensions in our schools of African Americans. If you look then and you look now, it's very similar, and that's kind of sad."

She said giving Davis a diploma was more than just a routine measure — it was about the district "correcting things" and taking stock and asking whether or not race affects the expulsion of future graduates.

"This took place in 1960 and is it still taking place now, and what can we do about it?" she asked. "It just depends on who is looking at it, who is making that decision and who is willing to challenge it."

Although Davis maintains the alcohol found in his desk decades ago did not belong to him, he and his family didn't challenge the district's decision. After a stint in the Air Force, Davis went to welding school and held jobs at Studebaker, Allis-Chalmers and AM General.

His father, who was once the pastor of Greater Friendship Missionary Baptist Church, gave each of his children a suit for high school graduation. Davis was the only one who never got one.

"I'll buy him a suit now," said Clara, who has been married to Davis for 52 years and is currently searching for the perfect frame for the diploma. "I'm quite sure it would have been altogether different if it had been a white boy who had alcohol in his desk."

Clara Davis was the one who made sure her husband's high school senior portrait sits in the front living room of their Sheridan Street home — like a lone candle burning in a window. Now the diploma will sit right next to it.

Of her husband's story, Clara said: "It's a lesson for young people to know what other people went through when they were coming up."

Davis said he hopes people know his story and take from it a lesson of some sorts: If you've been wronged, just keep telling people until you find someone who can do something.

"'Cause it can happen," he said.

States push for caregiver tax credit as care costs soar

By SAMANTHA YOUNG
Kaiser Health News

Gloria Brown didn't get a good night's sleep. Her husband, Arthur Brown, 79, has Alzheimer's disease and had spent most of the night pacing their bedroom, opening and closing drawers, and putting on and taking off his jacket.

So Gloria, 73, asked a friend to take Arthur out for a few hours one recent afternoon so she could grab a much-needed nap. She was lucky that day because she didn't need to call upon the home health aide who comes to their house twice a week.

The price of paying for help isn't cheap: The going rate in the San Francisco Bay Area ranges from $25 to $35 an hour. Gloria Brown estimates she has spent roughly $72,000 on caregivers, medications and supplies since her husband was diagnosed four years ago.

"The cost can be staggering," said state Assemblyman Jim Patterson (R-Fresno), author of a bill that would give family caregivers in California a tax credit of up to $5,000 annually to help offset their expenses.

A 2016 study by AARP found that the average caregiver spends $6,954 a year on out-of-pocket costs caring for a family member. The expenses range from $7 for medical wipes to tens of thousands of dollars to retrofit a home with a walk-in shower or hire outside help.

Gloria Brown estimates she has spent roughly $72,000 on caregivers, medications and supplies. As her husband's disease progresses, she expects costs to escalate.

AARP, a lobbying organization for people 50 and older, is pushing similar bills in at least seven other state legislatures this year, said Elaine Ryan, the group's vice president of State Advocacy and Strategy Integration. Arizona, Illinois, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Wisconsin are considering legislation, and AARP expects measures also to be introduced in Florida, Massachusetts and Ohio.

In Wisconsin, two Republicans and two Democrats are behind that state's tax credit measure.

"We need a whole discussion about how we can best keep people at home and meet their needs," said state Rep. Debra Kolste, a Democrat who explained that most people know someone who is caring for a family member. She hopes the measure can make it through the Republican legislature and be signed by Wisconsin's Democratic governor.

New Jersey approved a state income tax credit in 2017 specifically for caregivers of wounded veterans. However, efforts in other states have failed, including in Arizona last year and Mississippi and Virginia this year.

At the federal level, bills that would have created a federal income tax credit of up to $3,000 never got out of congressional committees last year.

"Whether I'm in Billings, Montana, or in Mississippi, the caregiver tax credit is something that people are asking for," Ryan said. "All they're asking for is a little financial help to offset these costs."

Gloria Brown is the primary caregiver for her husband, Arthur, who was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease four years ago. (Emma Marie Chiang for California Healthline)

A tax credit, said Brown and other caregivers, would be welcome relief to the estimated 4.5 million family caregivers in California who care for a loved one with a chronic, disabling or serious health condition. Nationwide, the AARP estimates there are about 40 million people caring for family members.

The Browns, who have been married 51 years and live in San Mateo, California, have good medical coverage but, like most seniors, live on a fixed income.

As her husband's disease progresses, Gloria Brown expects costs to escalate. For instance, she wants to install bars in the bathroom to help prevent her husband from falling, and anticipates she will need more professional help.

"I think we're just moving into that stage where I'm going to see the dollars going out for things that will help to make things easier for him at home and more comfortable," Brown said. "It's a cost you just hadn't anticipated."

Long-term caregiving has emerged as one of the major issues in California's Capitol this year, with proposals ranging from naming a state "Aging Czar" to funding a new cash benefit for long-term care services. In his State of the State address last month, Gov. Gavin Newsom called for a master plan for aging.

"I've had some personal — and painful — experience with this recently," Newsom told the joint session of the legislature.

Newsom, whose father had dementia and died last year, also has tapped former first lady Maria Shriver to lead a new Alzheimer's Prevention and Preparedness Task Force, and has asked lawmakers to approve $3 million in state funds for Alzheimer's disease research.

Patterson's bill would provide up to a $5,000 state income tax credit to family caregivers for five years, starting in tax year 2020. They would be reimbursed for 50 percent of eligible expenses, such as retrofitting a home, hiring an aide and leasing or buying specialty equipment. The credit would be available to individuals who make up to $170,000 a year, or joint income tax filers who make up to $250,000.

Patterson, a Republican in the minority, is hopeful he can convince his colleagues that giving people a tax credit is financially sound because it would enable caregivers to keep their loved ones at home rather than relying on more expensive government services.

"If members of the legislature and the governor would look through the eyes of their own families, friends and neighbors … I think it can be passed and be signed," Patterson said.

But the measure faces competition for a slice of California's $21 billion surplus, from proposals by the governor and lawmakers to boost funding for education, health care, housing and dozens of other programs.

For Pam Sogge of Oakland, California, a tax credit would allow her to hire a home health aide for an additional three hours a week.

Her husband, Rick Sogge, 61, has early-onset Alzheimer's and becomes frantic when left by himself. Sometimes when she leaves him alone in another room of their home, he searches for her every two minutes.

Because Rick Sogge is still physically healthy, most of the couple's caregiving expenses pay for part-time help to take him on outings so Pam can work, run errands or go to the doctor's office.

"You have a very uncertain financial future. You don't know what's going to happen. You don't know how long it's going to take. So you're very conservative," said Pam Sogge, 56, who has been caring for her husband for five years. "A tax credit, in a way, it's permission and encouragement to get some help."

Seniors seek pot for age-related aches

LAGUNA WOODS, California (AP) — The group of white-haired folks — some pushing walkers, others using canes — arrive right on time at the gates of Laguna Woods Village, an upscale retirement community in the picturesque hills that frame this Southern California suburb a few miles from Disneyland.

There they board a bus for a quick trip to a building that, save for the green Red Cross-style sign in the window, resembles a trendy coffee bar. The people, mostly in their 70s and 80s, pass the next several hours enjoying a light lunch, playing a few games of bingo and selecting their next month's supply of cannabis-infused products.

"It's like the ultimate senior experience," laughs 76-year-old retired beauty products distributor Ron Atkin as he sits down to watch the bingo at the back of the Bud and Bloom marijuana dispensary in Santa Ana.

Most states now have legal medical marijuana, and 10 of them, including California, allow anyone 21 or older to use pot recreationally. The federal government still outlaws the drug even as acceptance increases. The 2018 General Social Survey, an annual sampling of Americans' views, found a record 61 percent back legalization, and those 65 and older are increasingly supportive.

Indeed, many industry officials say the fastest-growing segment of their customer base is people like Atkin — aging baby boomers or even those a little older who are seeking to treat the aches and sleeplessness and other maladies of old age with the same herb that many of them once passed around at parties.

"I would say the average age of our customers is around 60, maybe even a little older," said Kelty Richardson, a registered nurse with the Halos Health clinic in Boulder, Colorado, which provides medical examinations and sells physician-recommended cannabis through its online store.

Its medical director, Dr. Joseph Cohen, conducts "Cannabis 101" seminars at the nearby Balfour Senior Living community for residents who want to know which strains are best for easing arthritic pain or improving sleep.

Relatively little scientific study has verified the benefits of marijuana for specific problems. There's evidence pot can relieve chronic pain in adults, according to a 2017 report from the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine, but the study also concluded that the lack of scientific information poses a risk to public health.

At Bud and Bloom, winners of the bingo games take home new vape pens, but Atkin isn't really there for that. He's been coming regularly for two years to buy cannabis-infused chocolate bars and sublingual drops to treat his painful spinal stenosis.

It was "desperation" that brought him here, he said, adding his doctors didn't suggest he try medical marijuana but didn't discourage him either.

The dispensary is filled with the 50 people from the bus as they peruse counters and coolers containing everything from gel caps to drops to cannabis-infused drinks, not to mention plenty of old-fashioned weed.

Ponder twirls one-hitter for 3-0 Raiders

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Abby Ponder has helped Trimble County to wins in its first two games with her bat. On Friday, the junior found another way to lift the Raiders to victory.

Ponder struck out 10 batters and twirled a one-hit shutout as Trimble County run-ruled visiting Bardstown 10-0 in six innings on a sunny, but cold, Friday evening in Bedford.

Softball Roundup

Ponder, a junior, hit home runs in each of the Raiders' first two games of the season but was held to an 0-for-2 performance at the plate on Friday as Bardstown starting pitcher Elysha Craig got the memo and didn't give the slugger anything to hit.

But Trimble didn't need Ponder's bat, not with the way she was dealing in the circle.

"Abby threw the ball well but we do need to do a little better job of fielding the ball," first-year Trimble coach Randy Wilson said. "We had some girls missing tonight and we had to move some around to different positions. But you take those two errors away and Abby would have had a no-hitter. I don't know much about (Bardstown) but I'm proud of these girls for coming out and run-ruling a team, even with the errors."

Ponder faced only three batters over the minimum and was never threatened. Maria Young led off the second with a single up the middle for the Tigers' only hit and the only other batters to reach for Bardstown came on a walk in the fifth and an error in the sixth.

With the way Ponder was pitching, the Raiders didn't need many runs. But thanks to Bardstown's porous defense, they got plenty anyway.

Trimble (3-0) scored three runs in the bottom of the first thanks to hits by Rachel Liter and Emma Ginn and some alert baserunning and added two more runs in the third on RBIs from McKinna Ritchie and Lauren Haney and a Tiger error.

Trimble's final five runs were all unearned as Bardstown's defense committed four more errors as the Raiders scored three in the fourth and one each in the fifth and sixth innings to end the game early.

"We had some very smart baserunning," Wilson said. "I made a bad call here at third one time and sent a girl when I shouldn't have, but overall they did a good job."

Because of the errors, as well as five walks and two hit-batters, Trimble managed only four hits in the game. Kaylee Payton had a hit, scored two runs and stole two bases, Liter had a hit, a stolen base and a run, Ginn had a hit, an RBI, three runs scored and two stolen bases, and Haney had a hit, an RBI, a run scored and a stolen base. The Raiders stole eight bases total.

"We're 3-0 now and we're making improvements every game," Wilson said. "If we continue to do that, we'll only get stronger and stronger and better and better. Some of the girls that have been hitting well didn't do that tonight but the other girls picked up the slack. All in all, it was a great performance all-around."

Trimble County returns to action on Tuesday when the Raiders travel to Williamstown.

Indiana held the Razorbacks without a field goal the final 6:58 of the game.

Juwan Morgan had 15 points and seven rebounds for Indiana (19-15). De'Ron Davis added 10 points. Rob Phinisee had seven rebounds for the hosts. Green made four of Indiana's six 3-pointers.

Desi Sills had 18 points for the Razorbacks (18-16). Isaiah Joe added 12 points. Harris had seven assists.

Indiana played its second stragith game in the NIT without freshman starter Romeo Langford, who is dealing with a back injury.

Small-ball Raiders run to 5-2 win over Juggernauts

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Trimble County used aggressive baserunning to generate runs and excellent pitching to beat Lloyd Memorial 5-2 in baseball on Saturday for its first win of the season.

The Raiders managed only four hits in the game but manufactured nearly every run they scored. That was more than enough for pitchers Landon Sutherland and Seth Brewer, who combined to strike out 10 and hold Lloyd to just nine baserunners in the game.

Baseball Roundup

"Landon pitched an excellent game and Seth came in and closed out. They did exactly what we planned to do today," said Trimble County coach Brent Taylor, who picked up his first career win. "It was a good day for baseball and it was a good win for us. Hopefully we've got the momentum going."

Lloyd (0-2) took an early lead in the top of the first after Ben McGue hammered a two-out RBI double but the rest of the game belonged to the Raiders.

Trimble answered that opening score with two runs in the bottom of the first, using baserunning to generate both.

Austin Cissell opened with a single then promptly stole second and third. Dalton Penick walked and the pair pulled off a double-steal that allowed Cissell to score. Penick then came in on a groundout by Matt Saylor.

A double by Brewer and an error led to Trimble's third run in the second inning and Evan Stevens scored in the fourth when he reached on an error, stole second and came all the way around to score thanks to two wild pitches.

Trimble (1-2) added its final run in the fifth when Penick doubled, stole third base and came in on Sutherland's sacrifice fly.

All told, the Raiders stole nine bases on the day and put pressure on the Juggernauts very chance they could.

"We want to play the small-ball game and be aggressive on the bases and today they were," Taylor said.

Hanover baseball bangs 25 hits in Quakers split

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

HANOVER COLLEGE

Hanover College baseball belted out 25 hits but managed only a doubleheader split at Wilmington (Ohio) on Sunday.

The Panthers had 11 hits — including a pair of home runs — in a 6-3 win in the opener but lost 5-4 in game two despite 14 hits.

HANOVER ROUNDUP

Mark Walkenhorst and Andrew Littlefield each hit home runs as part of a three-run fourth inning in the opener.

Littlefield added a double and went 3-for-4 with two runs scored in the game. Walkenhorst, who had hit two home runs in one inning against Sewanee (Tenn.) last week, went 2-for-4 with two RBIs and a run scored.

Ty Stover added two hits and an RBI while Grant Larimore and Kevin Van Valkenburg each had a hit and an RBI.

David Hermann (2-1) struck out 10 without walking a batter in seven innings to pick up the win. Justin Pope worked a scoreless ninth for his first save of the season.

Hanover out-hit Wilmington 14-11 in game two but the host Quakers pushed three runs across in the bottom of the eighth inning to claim the win.

Garrett Zorb started for the Panthers but settled for a no-decision after allowing one earned run on six hits in seven innings with two strikeouts and a walk. George Dant (0-3) took the loss after allowing three earned runs on four hits in just a third of an inning in relief.

Tyler Fitch went 3-for-4 while Van Valkenburg had two hits and two RBIs to lead the Hanover offense. Spencer Coop, Chase Sizemore and Littlefield added two hits each.

Hanover (8-7) visits Thomas More (Ky.) on Tuesday.

Softball splits at Spalding

Hanover College's softball left Louisville with a doubleheader split with Spalding University on Friday, losing 1-0 and winning 10-1.

The opening game was a scoreless tie until the bottom of the ninth when Spalding picked up the only run of the game on an Ally Klein bunt single that scored Madison Consolidated High School graduate Amilia Hall, who was in the game as a pinch runner.

Jennah Ruddick went 2-for-3 to lead Hanover while Mackenzie Smith, Ashley Swearingen, Kiley Shedron and Rachel Cox each had singles.

Lily Beurman (5-5) allowed just one run on six hits with seven strikeouts and no walks in six and one-third innings while pinned with the hard luck loss.

Hanover blew open game two early, scoring three runs in the first and six in the second to win going away.

Carlie Roark and Shelby Edington and each hit home runs in the game. Roark was also 2-for-3 with a double, four RBIs and two runs scored while Edington was 2-for-4 with two runs scored.

Smith was 2-for-4 with a double, a triple and two runs scored, Cox was 2-for-3 with two runs and an RBI, and former Southwestern player Brittney Ralston was 1-for-3.

Allison Wiseman (2-1) picked up the win for Hanover after allowing just one run on five hits in five innings with five strikeouts and no walks.

Hall, a 2018 Madison graduate who is now a freshman at Spalding, saw action in left field in game two for Spalding and went 1-for-1 at the plate.

Hanover (7-7) hosts Thomas More (Ky.) for two games on Wednesday.

LAX 2-0 for weekend

Hanover men's lacrosse scored a pair of wins at home over the weekend including one in dramatic fashion.

The Panthers whipped Fontbonne (Mo.) 19-7 at home on Saturday then got a Bret Schell goal in the third overtime to knock off Westminster (Pa.) 14-13 on Sunday.

Hanover scored eight goals in each of the first two quarters to build a 16-1 halftime lead and cruise in its Saturday afternoon rout over Fontbonne.

Ian Kimmins and Schell each had four goals and an assist to lead the Panthers while Jackson Wheeler and Noah King scored three goals each. Patrick Boylston had two assists and Eric Clay picked up 11 ground balls.

Noah Dubrava and Sean O'Meara each stopped three shots in goal.

Westminster scored seven goals in the second period and took an 11-7 lead into the fourth quarter when Hanover rallied to send Sunday's game into overtime.

After two scoreless extra periods, Hanover finally got the game-winner when Schell scored from the up position on an assist by Boylston to end the contest.

Kimmins had five goals and three assists to lead Hanover while Schell had three goals and 11 ground balls and Dallas Fonner had three goals and three assists. Boylston also had three assists and Clay had 10 ground balls.

Rookie Herta, 18, 1st at IndyCar Classic for youngest winner in history of series

By JIM VERTUNO
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN, Texas — Everything went Colton Herta's way on Sunday, from the victory on the race track to the sparkling wine on the podium instead of apple cider.

The 18-year American rookie became the youngest winner in IndyCar history when he captured the IndyCar Classic after a late-race crash near the entry to pit row helped him steal past the leaders to the checkered flag.

Flanked on the podium by 28-year-old Josef Newgarden and 38-year-old Ryan Hunter-Reay, Herta was handed a bottle of sparkling wine for the victory celebration while someone handed Newgarden the cider.

Glug! Herta, still well under the legal drinking age of 21, took a big drink.

"I didn't switch back," Herta said. "I took a swig and said, 'This is real!"

Newgarden was impressed.

"They gave me his drink, and gave him mine. Which is very cool of Texas," Newgarden said.

Herta's win also delivered the first victory for Harding Steinbrenner Racing , where George Steinbrenner IV — yes, of the Steinbrenner baseball family — is the youngest co-owner in series history and the youngest owner of a race-winning car at age 22. After the victory, the New York Yankees tweeted congratulations to the victors.

"In this sport it takes perfect execution and a little bit of luck," Steinbrenner said. "We caught the little bit of luck ... and Colton did the rest."

Herta was running a distant third behind Team Penske's Will Power and Andretti Autosports' Alexander Rossi until James Hinchcliffe bumped rookie Felix Rosenqvist into a spin and then the wall near the entry to pit lane.

Power, who started from pole position and dominated through 45 laps, lost his big lead when the caution flag came out, and then had his race end with a driveshaft failure during his last pit stop for a late tire change. Rossi finished ninth.

Power started from pole position and could have earned a $100,000 bonus if he had won the race.

"Massively disappointed man. (To) lead so many laps," Power said. "The yellow didn't get us, the drive shaft did."

Herta still had work to do to stay ahead of Newgarden and Hunter-Reay, both former IndyCar champions. Herta dialed up the speed that made him so quick on the track in preseason testing.

"He's been quick since he hit the track," Hunter-Reay said. "At first sight I wouldn't trust that guy with my Honda Civic, but he's very talented. This is the big league and he just won an IndyCar race."

The previous youngest race winner was Graham Rahal in 2008 at age 19. Herta turns 19 on Saturday.

"One race win isn't enough. I want to get another," Herta said.

NO LIMITS

IndyCar didn't enforce track rules that apply to the Formula One cars the Circuit of the Americas was built for. That led to some wide racing and ultimately the crackup that cost Power his chance to win.

The cars were allowed sweeping runoffs through turns and Rosenqvist and Hinchcliffe touched as they were coming out of a wide run on Turn 19 near pit lane. Two days earlier, Rosenqvist said he likes the open racing without track limits and Power said they should be enforced.

Hunter-Reay and Newgarden said the issue will have to be addressed before next year's race.

"I'll be happy not to see Turn 19 again for a couple of weeks," Hunter-Reay said. "You are rolling the dice a little bit in there."

SERIES POINTS

After a first and second in the first two races, Newgarden leads the driver's standings with 93 points and Herta is second with 75.

"Colton drove flawlessly. It's big to win your first IndyCar race," Newgarden said. "We have to have podiums when we're not winning races to win the championship."

Keselowski routs field at Martinsville

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Brad Keselowski gave Team Penske and the new Ford Mustang its third Cup victory through the first six races of the season by routing the field at Martinsville Speedway.

Keselowski led 446 of the 500 laps around the shortest track on the NASCAR schedule and was only challenged a handful of times by Chase Elliott — the only driver to pass Keselowski on the track Sunday.

Although Elliott led 49 laps, a late caution sent the field to pit road and Keselowski beat Elliott back to the track. Elliott could never get close enough to challenge Keselowski for the win again.

"The car was really good. Just a great day for a team," Keselowski said. "Just one of those days you dream of as a race car driver, where you've got a great car."

The 446 laps led is the most for a winning driver since Kyle Petty led 484 to win at Rockingham in 1992. It was the most laps Keselowski has ever led in a single race, passing the mark of 312 laps out front at Texas Motor Speedway in 2015.

He credited the offseason work by Ford, which rolled out a new Cup car at the start of the season, and the Team Penske pit stops that got him off pit road first every time he came in for service.

Ford has three wins this season, all from Team Penske, while Toyota won the other three races.

Martinsville, a paper-clip-shaped track at 0.526 miles, typically forces drivers to gouge each other out of the way. The tight confines of the tiny Virginia track raises the aggravation levels for most of the field and usually leads to bumping, banging and busted-up race cars. But NASCAR's new rules package, in its first stop at a short track, seemed to hamper drivers' ability to close on the leader and it limited passing opportunities.

The one time Elliott did pass Keselowski, he studied Elliott's lines and took notes for when he was back out front.

"He was certainly faster on that short run, and when he passed me I learned just enough," Keselowski said. "The pit crew got me back in front of him on the next to last pit stop, and I seemed to kind of apply the lessons."

Elliott finished second in a Chevrolet from Hendrick Motorsports — the first top-five finish for a Hendrick driver this season.

'Adam Ruins Everything' host visits Hanover College

By ELISABETH MOORE

Parasites, advertising and the manipulative role of modern culture were the main topics at the Hanover College Horner Center Friday night as "Adam Ruins Everything" host Adam Conover performed for a packed audience.

As part of the Hanover College Enrichment Series, Conover's hour-and-a-half set was called "Mind Parasites," which he said is one part stand-up comedy and one part psychedelic biology lesson. Before Conover took the stage, he was introduced by Hanover student Priya Wood, who was chosen when she retweeted Conover's tweet about visiting Hanover College, saying "Y'all I'm so excited help!!"

Throughout the performance, Conover described various parasites that take over the minds of their bug or animal hosts and applied that to how various things in life can take over the minds of humans.

"I've been trying to find a way to combine this sort of informational comedy I'm known for on 'Adam Ruins Everything' with stand-up comedy," Conover said.

He said he chose to come to Hanover because colleges are among his favorite places to perform. While working on "Adam Ruins Everything" for the past four years, Conover said, he still tries to perform outside of the show as much as he can.

Adam Conover, left, recently wrote a column for the Hollywood Reporter, where he explains why he took to the picket line in support of the teachers of Los Angeles. (Photo from adamconover.net)

"Adam Ruins Everything" is a series, Conover explained, that aims to debunk misconceptions throughout U.S. culture and society. It now has more than 60 episodes. Among its topics are an episode about food and how food was not always so heavily monitored and safe to eat. Much of that episode was inspired by the work of Harvey Wiley, a chemist who grew up on a farm near Kent, Indiana, in the mid-1800s and a Hanover College alumnus. Wiley Hall is named for Harvey Wiley, who pioneered some of the first food safety bills.

Conover said his favorite part of the show is meeting the people who help find or create research for the show.

"I get to meet really incredible experts and advocates from around the world and that is really, really exciting to me," Conover said. "From 'Adams Ruins Everything' in general, I want people to take the facts away with them. And also, I want to encourage people to think more critically about the world around them in general."

Priya Wood, a Hanover College student who was chosen to introduce Adam Conover before his performance, sent out this tweet about the event, which led to her being chosen to introduce Conover.

With the show "Mind Parasites," Conover said, he wants to create a more focused version of "Adam Ruins Everything." While people learn about the different bugs and parasites he mentions throughout the show, Conover said he would like people to think twice about free will and its value.

Conover said he would like to continue doing "Adam Ruins Everything" as long as he can. He said there are a million topics that people can learn more about that the show has yet to cover.

For those interested in research or other topics that relate to his show, Conover's advice was to do it and find the area that best suits you.

"Please do it, because I don't call myself a research journalist," Conover said. "Fundamentally, I am benefitting from the work that journalists do."

Old box of letters from an ex-boyfriend

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I'm a happily married almost-70-year-old woman who has been sorting and purging the contents of boxes in my attic in preparation for downsizing. I was surprised to find one shoe box stuffed full of letters that an old high school boyfriend, "Dave," wrote to me during his first year in college. I reread enough of these letters to realize that what he wrote was much less about his romantic feelings for me at the time than it was about his own perception of his college experience and even his relationship with his parents.

My question is whether I should return these letters to him (I can find his address on the internet) or chuck them into the recycle bin.

I have no interest in renewing any contact with Dave. I am not even going to my 50-year high school reunion this year, where I might run into him. In other words, if I were to return these letters, it would not be in hopes of seeing him again or even eliciting a response. Because I am in the process of writing my own memoirs, I do sense the value these letters might have for this man. He would read about his day-to-day experience at college — a prestigious Ivy League school, I might add — and based on my peek into his letters, he would have the opportunity to read his own impressions about his relationship with his father, a man probably long dead. In this era of ephemeral communication via email and text, these handwritten letters strike me as potentially priceless to this man.

I brought up my dilemma with my husband, a sensible man whom I adore. He suggested that often the past is better left in the past, an adage I agree with heartily. What do you suggest I do? — Time Capsule in My Attic

Dear Time Capsule: Your husband is right that sometimes the past is better left alone. However, this is about Dave's past, not yours. Why not let Dave decide whether or not to leave it alone? Send him the letters, along with a cover note explaining what they are and telling him that he can feel free to recycle them if he'd like but you didn't feel right throwing them out. What a treasure-trove this could be for him and for any children or grandchildren he might have. And you will be able to feel good knowing you've gone out of your way to do a kind thing for an old friend.

Dear Annie: In the 1970s, I was a single mother, and one year, when I was between jobs, I was pleasantly surprised to get a Christmas dinner box from a charity. When I opened the can of corn, however, the stench was awful! It wasn't as though we starved because of it, but it was disappointing. This experience taught me to donate only new food.

It is wonderful that people help people by donating, but please remember: If it is too worn-out for your use or the expiration date is past, no matter how low the price, it is not a bargain for someone who is eking out a living. — Grateful

Dear Grateful: Well said. Thanks for sharing your experience of being on the receiving end of a well-intentioned but not well-executed donation.

BRIDGE

SHOULD YOUR DEFENSE BE ACTIVE OR PASSIVE?

Mortimer Adler, a philosopher, educator and author who lived to be 98, said, "All genuine learning is active, not passive."

At the bridge table, though, we learn sometimes that it is better to be passive than active.

When you defend actively, you try to win tricks early in the play. For example, you will lead from king-jack-third, hoping partner can produce the queen or ace. But when you feel it is preferable to defend passively, you sit at home waiting for declarer to knock on your door and give you tricks.

Which policy should West adopt in this deal? South is in four spades after North has shown game-going values with exactly five spades, and South has corrected from three no-trump to four spades. What should West lead?

Here, South would have done well to settle for three no-trump, which would have had nine top tricks: five spades, one heart, one diamond and two clubs. But it was normal for South to bid four spades with such weak clubs and the potential blockage in spades.

It is dangerous leading around to a big, balanced hand. West should find the safest lead he has, which is a trump. Yes, that might take a trump finesse for declarer, but he could have always done it himself. (Here, a club is also safe, but I dislike leading from a jack. A red-suit lead immediately concedes a 10th trick.)

After a spade lead, South will draw trumps, and as long as West does not discard a heart, the contract will probably fail. (If you have some spare time, work out how declarer could still get home. It is not easy.)
